MAITHILI JHA SPEECH TO TEXT

Hi, my name is Maithili Jha, and today I'm exploring the original MyGov podcast website and comparing it with the website my brother Soumil and his classmates have made for their UI UX, that is User Interface and User Experience assignment. So I will try to find something interesting to listen to for a college assignment. Okay, there are quite a few episodes here, but I'm not immediately sure where to start. I will scroll a little and see what catches my attention. The titles are visible, but I wish I could tell more about each episode before choosing one. I will click this one. Oh, I can't play directly from here. It's a bit annoying. I expected the podcast to start when I clicked the episode. Irr... government websites at the end of the day. Let me go back and try another one. I am spending more time figuring out the website than actually finding something to listen to. I also want to look for an episode about education or student opportunities, but I do not see an obvious way to filter everything by topic. I will keep scrolling for now. Honestly, the website has the content I am looking for, but discovering it feels harder than it needs to be. I'd prefer clearer categories and an easier way to search and a player that does not make me jump between pages. Now I am trying the redesigned website. I will look for something related to education or student opportunities. Oh, there is a search bar. Let me type a keyword and see what comes up. Nice, I can get relevant results without scrolling through the whole page. I will open one of these episodes. The cover art and play button make it easier to understand what I can do. Great. The audio starts here. I can still browse while the player stays at the bottom, which is convenient. I will save this episode because I might want to listen to it later. Let me check the library. Oh yeah, it's saved, which is useful when I am busy with classes and do not have time to finish listening in one go. I like that the redesigned site gives me clearer ways to find, play, and save episodes. It feels more practical for everyday use. I choose this version because I can spend less time navigating and more time listening.